November 5, 2004

1. It's a bimalleolar fracture. The joint surface is involved site of fracture involves all the movement of the ankle. That is dorsiflexion, plantarflexion, inversion and eversion of the foot. It is the weight bearing joint hence complete recovery is very important for the patient to stand & to walk.

2. Presently the patient is not able to put full weight on walk without support. She limps while walking. The prognosis can be remarked on only after further physiotherapy of five weeks will depend upon ankle joint range of movement.

3. Patient condition can improve or worsen depending on complications:

a. Joints stiffness & swelling. Presently joint is very stiff. Patient is undergoing physiotherapy since last three weeks. If response is not satisfactory then manipulation under anaesthesia may be needed to restore full movement.

Further complications which are very commonly seen in this fracture due to late recovery are:

b. ~~Algodystrophy~~. There is pain & swelling & loss of tenderness seen in the ankle joint associated with changes & severe osteoporosis.

c. The patient can not dorsiflex her ankle so abnormal stresses are put on the neighbouring joints specially the knee. Such complications can also lead to undue stress on the spine due to limping.

d. There is risk of long term limitations & ability to endurance standing & walking as presently the fractured ankle is swollen and there is limitation of all the ankle movements causing the limp and it is impossible for the patient to walk and stand without support.

e. The patient was not wearing Sari at the time of accident wearing fitting clothes & sports shoes which are unlikely to get entangled in the foot. Such injuries can be caused by slip on a slanting board.

f. Plate & screws shall remain in body for life.
